Gen Nansouty arrived in the evening on the field of battle, distinguishing himself highly. At eight in the evening the battle ended, and we remained masters of the field. During the right Outlinet's ended and we remained masters of the field. he field. During the night Oudinot's corps, Hillair's division, and two brigades of caval-ry, crossed from the right bank; to the left. On the 21st, at 4 P. M. the duke of Rivoli was engaged with the enemy, who made feveral unfuccessful attacks on the village; but Rivoli completely defeated them. The enemy occupying a large lpace between the right and left wings, we took the refolution of penetrating their centre. The doke of Montebello headed the charge. Oudinot was on the left. St. Hillaire in the centre of the and Boudet on the right.—The centre of the enemy could not withstand us; in a moment

> The duke of Istria made several fine charges-It seemed all over with the Austrian ary, when at 7 in the morning an aid-de-camp of the emperor came to inform him that the ising of the Danube had drifted a great number of trees and booms which in confequence of the events in Vienna, had been cut down and laid on the bank, and that they had broken down the bridges which communicated from the right bank with the little island and with the island In-der Lobau. All the referve corps which were advan-cident the emperor refolved to ftop the troops from advancing. He ordered the duke of Montebello to Hop on the field of battle, and take his polition with the left wing a-gainst a curtain which the Duke of Rivoli covered, and his right wing at Essling. The cannon, infantry and cartriges which belonged to our parks could not be brought over. The enemy was in the greatest disorder just HAVE received, and are now opening in the store house of Maj. Alexander Parker, opposite the court house, a large assortment of the cou had been broken down. The flackening of MINARY for Young Ladies again in Lexington, on the 24th day of April next, in the house at the corner of High-street, opposite Mr. Thomas Bod-left him no doubt respecting the unforeseen they's. Her terms of tuition the same as before, but accident that had happened. All his cannon the price of board she has reduced to 80 dollars per ann, and hopes her attention will merit patronage. M. he made his greatest efforts, supported by 200 months. cannon, to overthrow the French army-but all his efforts turn only to his discomfiture. THE subscriber having opened a shop on the Three times he attacked the Villages, and iree times he filled them with his dead all kinds of WHITSMITH's WORK, The enemy refumed the polition which they had left before the attack began, and we remained masters of the field of battle. Their loss has been great-Prisoners who have been taken fay, that they lost 23 Generals and 60 superior officers. Marshal Webber and 1500 prisoners are in our hands. Our ofs has also been very considerable-1100 killed and 3,000 wounded.

The duke of Montebello (Lasnes) was vounded by a cannon ball in the thigh on he 22, in the evening. Gen. Hillaire is alwounded. Gen Durofnel was killed .-The waters of the Danube did not permit the ridges to be rebuilt during the night, and he emperor ordered the army to pals the litle arm from the left bank, and to take a potion at Loban. We are labouring to replace he bridges, and nothing will be undertaken till they are replaced.

(In addition to these particulars, a great part of the bulletin confilts of a lentimental description of the interview between Lafnes and Bonaparte; at a time when the marshal's wound was thought to be mortal, in which of courle, the duke of Montebello manifelled all possible heroism, and evinced the greatest readiness to die for his Emperor; and hat the Emperor was melted into tears.

The bulletin has, however, other passages rom which some inferences may be drawn, is to the extent of the lofs fullained by the French. Bonaparte, it is faid, boatts that the retreat was well conducted, though 200 pieces of cannon were playing upon them, which they could not answer, during which 40,000 rounds of shot were fired amongst them. Bonaparte promises to repair his loss, and declares his intentions not to renew the attack till his force is concentrated, and better prepared. He allows the Austrian army to have been well furnished and equipped on the occafion.)

And, on the receipt of an official note, eagaging to adopt the three conditions afore-faid, his Majesty would be ready to repeal the orders in council—either previous or sub-sequent to the conclusion of a Treaty for that purpole-for which a person would be immediately appointed to negociate.

note (Instructions.)"

In our paper of this day will be found a copy of the infructions produced by Mr. the 20th of June. Canning in the British parliament, as the balis on which the late arrangement was entered into by Mr. Erskine.

It appears to us extremely improbable that these were the only instructions on which Mr. Erskine proceeded in the negociation at this place, and for thefe reasons : Mr. The Kine, in his first letter, as a preliminary to any overture for the renewal of intercourse, offered what was deemed adequate fatisfac tion for the affair of the Chefapeake. Where, in these instructions, is any instruction relative to the affair of the Chefapeake ? It is not even mentioned: & the presumption is, that there was a previous communication, the confidential nature of which possibly prevented its publication. Indeed, in the inftructions published, "a former despatch" is mentioned, the contents of which, however, are Again-I hefe inftructions require a formal recognition by the United States of very recent, frequent, and wanton attacks mol recognition by the United States of the kind, I feel compelled to step forward three conditions, to one at least of which the government of the United States could never accede. It may well be doubted whether accede. It may well be doubted whether accede the may be doubted whether accede the may be doubted whether accede the may be doubted from the conditions and states and give the world a fair and simple statement of facts.

You and myself hired those hands in part-rumour of the fiver spread last week without the fiver spread las Mr. Erskine would so far have deviated from positive instructions, as to make an arrangement without the recognition of any one of For what cause then do you claim a preference. them. Mr. Oakely, the bearer of the despat-ches which were the basis of the arrangement made in this city, arrived in the Rosamond made in this city, arrived in the Rofamond on the third of April, which veffel brought London dates to the 9th of February. The inflructions published are dated the twenty-third of January, at least sixteen days prior to the departure of Mr. Oakely from London; and in this no mention is made of Mr. Oakely, who was felected as the Byarer. It feems to be a rational deduction, that Mr. Oakely was felected as the bearer of instructions of a subsequent date, also possibly of a considential nature, and therefore not published.

Only the Rofamond then considered by you drew a cunning and indifinite article between us, such as you could dissolve at will? Is it because you called the books before you, and after perusing them desired me to charge the greatest part of the best debts to your account, telling me that you could collect them with more ease than I could, (this being done) you dissolved the partnership?—By these means artifully and comningly throwing all the bad debts upon my shoulders—in blacksmith's phrase, the very fag end of the bar—Do you claim a preference because you turn otherefore not published.

with America. Did they expect it from the instructions now published? Did they expect it from the requisition of humilating conditions from us, in consequence of which they would do us the favor to tax us no longer? The idea is absurd. The idea is abfurd.
